As an assemblymember, Wallis advocates for increasing economic opportunity and social mobility, strengthening and protecting the values of desert communities (i.e., the Desert Hot Springs), strengthening public safety (i.e., funding the police, restore tough penalties for violent and property crimes, and keeping violent felons off the street by stopping them from getting out of prison early to reduce crime rates), improving the education system (i.e., making it easier for parents to get their children/students out of failing schools and into good public or charter schools/providing more school choices, creating safe zones where gangs, drugs, and weapons are prohibited, and increasing teacher wages), eliminating gas taxes, providing tax relief programs for employers, achieving affordable and accessible health care for all, middle-class tax cuts, investing into natural disaster prevention (particularly preventing wildfires), encouraging innovation, affordable housing (i.e., reducing unfair fees and regulations on new homeowners and lowering the cost of construction of housing for renting or purchasing), reducing homelessness (i.e., funding for full time, in-house drug and mental health treatment centers instead of failing homes programs, requiring each city to have the same number of clean, safe shelter beds as they do homeless people and have available services, cleaning up homeless camps/prohibit outdoor camping, and providing housing, treatment, and new jobs for the homeless), creating a healthy competitive market (i.e., eliminating burdensome regulations that hurt local and small businesses), cutting wasteful spending (i.e., allocating funding to infrastructure projects, economic development, and job creation), bringing commonsense conservative values into the state legislature, Pro-Choice, LGBTQ+ rights, protecting the environment while producing lots of energy (e.g., supporting projects that combat against climate change and having quality, clean, and chemical free air and water), cleaning up government waste, fraud, and abuse (i.e., increasing government transparency, prosecuting elected officials and government workers who use taxpayer money as their own private piggy bank, and requiring a public, nonpartisan audit of every department's spending every year to check for net value/effectiveness), and lowering the cost of living (i.e., stopping reckless government spending that causes inflation).
